Youth Receives Suspended Sentence
HUNTSVILLE, Ark. (AP)—An 18-year-old boy was convicted here yesterday of killing his father, but the Madison Circuit Court jury recommended that he be allowed to go free under suspended sentence.
The jury convicted Freddy Emmett of involuntary manslaughter, and set his sentence at three years imprisonment. A charge of second degree murder against young Emmett was reduced by the jury.
Emmett beat his father to death when the older man, an invalid who suffered from arthritis, refused to follow doctor's instructions. Young Emmett was nursing his father at his home near here at the time.
The famous painting of Mona Lisa was stolen from the Louvre in Paris in 1911.
to a Watertown, N. Y., lad who started his business career at nothing a week. He hired out as a stockroom boy on a trial basis. The first three months were on the cuff. His cuff. When he'd proved himself the boss put him on the payroll at $3.50 a week. This wasn't much, but then it was only an 84-hour work week.

No Explanation for Terrorism in Washington
(Editors: Puerto Rico's Gov. Luis Munoz Marin hurried to Washington a few hours after the shooting in Congress to express the indignation of the Puerto Rican people, to visit the wounded congressmen, and to call on the President. In the following dispatch he gives his views on the situation.)
By LUIS MUNOZ MAIN
Governor of Puerto Rico
(Written for the United Press)
WASHINGTON — There is no satisfactory explanation of the terrorism which fell upon Congress on Monday, but it is heartening to observe how wholesome and temperate the American people can be in the face of a senseless outrage.
I am glad to pay tribute to the American people and the Congress. It is a warning experience.
I would like to reiterate that Puerto Rican Nationalists number fewer than five hundred. Puerto Rico has suffered from their lunacy. The mainland also has suffered from their lunacy.
I have offered President Eisenhower a still greater cooperation by the commonwealth government in dealing jointly with this incredible and intolerable situation.
Every organized community must risk lunatics, political, social and economic. Nevertheless, there are resources in democratic communities which will reduce the risks they generate.
People in the states and in Puerto Rico know that a decent job is a means of sane life. God invented work as a route to sanity.
Friendly association in schools, in churches and in neighborhoods is a reassurance that all men want. In the states and in Puerto Rico we all must remember that. Officials in Puerto Rico and in the states can do a great deal to instruct one another on problems raised by immigration and long standing economic problems in Puerto Rico.
As for the lesser but crucially important business of policing, I shall make available to various police officers in the states and to the FBI whatever information the commonwealth of Puerto Rico has assembled, and will assemble, on terrorists and terroristically inclined. I anticipate a fruitful type of cooperation which will lessen the risks of such monstrous outbreaks as occurred this week.
On behalf of the people of Puerto Rico I commend the people of the United States. Their understanding, their forbearance and their kindness must make a mark of the decent opinions of mankind.
The attitude of the Congress, of affection and understanding for Puerto Rico, after the great outrage by a handful of Puerto Rican fanatics is a moving example of the nobility of the American people and the moral greatness of the American Congress.

NEW YORK STOCKS
NEW YORK, March 4 (AP)—Stocks pursued an irregular course today in a fairly active market.
Prices were mostly lower at the opening, and by mid-day they had become irregular under cross-currents of buying and selling.
Most price changes were in the small fractions, but a few wide moving issues swung nearly 4 points either way.
Oils were well out in front of the rest of the market, and the chemicals did well. There are several mildly depressed areas including motors, aircrafts, coppers, and distillers, railroads, steels and airlines were steady with a few good gainers.

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS
CHICAGO, March 4 (AP)—A new high since 1948 was set by soybeans on the Board of Trade again today as prices whirled up after a little early hesitancy.
Old crop soybeans futures were alone in showing strength, although the new crop months were ahead for modest gains most of the day. But the major grains all declined, wheat particularly being subjected to liquidation.
Soybeans also were helped by firmness in cash bean oil and meal both of which sold at new 1954 highs.
The new six year peak on soybeans was set by the May contract at $5.90.
Wheat closed 1-1/2 lower, March

NYC Board Tells Coach to Resign
NEW YORK (AP)—Nat Holman, who spent virtually his entire adult life building City College of New York into a national basketball power, was told today to retire or be fired in an unprecedented decision by the Board of Higher Education.
The graying perfectionist of the court only last week was cleared of charges of misconduct by a majority report of a three-man trial committee of the board as a result of the college basketball scandals of 1951. Complete exoneration by the entire tribunal was regarded as nothing more than a formality.
But for the first time, the board overruled the recommendation of its trial committee and thly blotted out the 34-year career of the man who became known to countless thousands as "Mr. Basketball."

Warrant for Bank Robber Suspect
OZAK (AP)—Franklin County Sheriff E. Pritchard said today that a warrant has been issued for the arrest of a man charged with robbing the American State Bank at Charleston, Ark., of more than $1,000.
Pritchard said the identity of the man was being withheld pending his arrest. He said Prosecuting Attorney Jack Yates last Monday filed an information charging the man with bank robbery.
The bank was robbed of about $1,150 last Friday by a jittery, bandage-faced bandit armed with a pistol.
Bank President Clyde Hlati said the bandit pretended he wanted to borrow some money and during the conversation pulled a gun.

Phony Savings Demos Cry at Budget Trim

WASHINGTON (AP)—Democrats fired charges of "phony savings" at Republican budget trimming today as the House wrangled over a bill appropriating $1,146,888,000 to finance the State, Justice and Commerce departments for the fiscal year starting next July 1.
Maritime and airline subsidies—along with the federal highway aid program—touched off hot disputes over government spending.
In yesterday's initial action, the House voted tentatively to hold back nearly half the 73 million dollars requested by the Eisenhower administration to subsidize American airlines for the coming year.
Republican spokesman said this reduction was not intended as savings. They proposed financing airline subsidy programs only temporarily until the Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB) is able to recompute subsidy formulas in the light of a recent Supreme Court decision.
The court held CAB must base payments on the profit and loss from an airline's entire operations, rather than on losses suffered from a single operation alone.
The decision placed in question subsidy payments primarily to a few big international airlines experiencing losses on their foreign operations—as distant from domestic runs.
Rep. Rooney (D-NY) top Democrat on the Appropriations subcommittee, accused Republicans of claiming "phony savings by deferring payments."
He also served notice he would seek to sever a House vote to appropriate 40 million dollars for subsidy payments to air carriers when the bill comes up for final approval tomorrow.
The sum is designed to carry all airlines until next March 1 when the CAB is expected to complete its re-estimate.
Traffic Increase Is Indicated
LITTLE ROCK (AP)—An analysis of gasoline sales shows that traffic on Arkansas highways increased four per cent in 1953.
Reporting this today the Senate Highway Department said most of the increase over 1952 was on the interstate highways.

NLB Stripped of Some Power

WASHINGTON (AP) The House Labor Committee voted today to strip the National Labor Relations board of its authority to try unfair labor practice cases.

Rep. R. Hol (Calif.) said he commuted vote, interpreted as a reversal for President Eisenhower, was 14-13 and criss-crossed party lines.

The proposal, one of four which the committee had before it, would abolish the NLRB as a quasi-judicial agency and establish it as strictly an administrative body. It would continue to handle matters concerning representation, including collective bargaining elections. However, all unfair labor practice cases would be referred to federal courts, with the complainant having the alternative of presenting his own case of having it presented from him by the government through the district attorney.

Chairman McConnell (Pa.) of the House group and Sen. H. Alexander Smith (R-NJ) Senate labor chairman, had a breakfast date with President Eisenhower only a few hours ahead of the session. There was no notice of what was discussed at the White House.

Youth Receives Suspended Sentence
HUNTSVILLE, Ark. (AP)—An 18-year-old boy was convicted here yesterday of killing his father, but the Madison Circuit Court jury recommended that he be allowed to go free under suspended sentence.
The jury convicted Freddy Emmett of involuntary manslaughter, and set his sentence at three years imprisonment. A charge of second degree murder against young Emmett was reduced by the jury. Emmett beat his father to death when the older man, an invalid who suffered from arthritis, refused to follow doctor's instructions. Young Emmett was nursing his father at their home near here at the time.

No Explanation for Terrorism in Washington
(Editors: Puerto Rico's Gov. Luis Munoz Marin hurried to Washington a few hours after the shooting in Congress to express the indignation of the Puerto Rican people, to visit the wounded congressmen, and to call on the President. In the following dispatch he gives his views on the situation.)
By LUIS MUNOZ MAIN
Governor of Puerto Rico
(Written for the United Press)

WASHINGTON — There is no satisfactory explanation of the terrorism which fell upon Congress on Monday, but it is heartening to observe how wholesome and temperate the American people can be in the face of a senseless outrage.
I am glad to pay tribute to the American people and the Congress. It is a warning experience.
I would like to reiterate that Puerto Rican Nationalists number fewer than five hundred. Puerto Rico has suffered from their lunacy. The mainland also has suffered from their lunacy.
I have offered President Eisenhower a still greater cooperation by the commonwealth government in dealing jointly with this incredible and intolerable situation.
Every organized community must risk lunatics, political, social and economic. Nevertheless, there are resources in democratic communities which will reduce the risks they generate.
People in the states and in Puerto Rico know that a decent job is a means of sane life. God invented work as a route to sanity.
Friendly association in schools, in churches and in neighborhoods is a reassurance that all men want. In the states and in Puerto Rico we all must remember that.
Officials in Puerto Rico and in the states can do a great deal to instruct one another on problems raised by immigration and long standing economic problems in Puerto Rico.
As for the lesser but crucially important business of policing, I shall make available to various police officers in the states and to the FBI whatever information the commonwealth of Puerto Rico has assembled, and will assemble, on terrorists and terroristically inclined. I anticipate a fruitful type of cooperation which will lessen the risks of such monstrous outbreaks as occurred this week.
On behalf of the people of Puerto Rico I commend the people of the United States. Their understanding, their forbearance and their kindness must make a mark on the decent opinions of mankind.
The attitude of the Congress, of affection and understanding for Puerto Rico, after the great outrage by a handful of Puerto Rican fanatics is a moving example of the nobility of the American people and the moral greatness of the American Congress.

NEW YORK, March 4 (H)— Cotton futures moved in a narrow range slow dealings today. The market started off steady on a flurry of mill buying and covering against export sales. When the demand had been filled, the market developed an easier tone on scattered liquidation.

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS
CHICAGO, March 4 (H)—A new high since 1948 was set by soybeans on the Board of Trade again today as prices whirled up after a little early hesitancy.
Old crop soybeans futures were alone in showing strength, although the new crop months were ahead for modest gains most of the day. But the major grains all declined, wheat particularly being subjected to liquidation.
Soybeans also were helped by firmness in cash bean oil and meal both of which sold at new 1954 highs.
The new six year peak on soybeans was set by the May contract at $39.

Warrant for Bank Robber Suspect
OZAK (H)—Franklin County Sheriff E. Pritchard said today that a warrant has been issued for the arrest of a man charged with robbing the American State Bank at Charleston, Ark., of more than $1,000.
Pritchard said the identity of the man was being withheld pending his arrest. He said Prosecuting Attorney Jack Yates last Monday filed an information charging the man with bank robbery.
The bank was robbed of about $1,150 last Friday by a jittery, bandage-faced bandit armed with a pistol.
Bank President Clyde Hlatt said the bandit pretended he wanted to borrow some money and during the conversation pulled a gun.

NEW YORK STOCKS
NEW YORK, March 4 (H)— Stocks pursued an irregular course today in a fairly active market.
Prices were mostly lower at the opening, and by mid-day they had become irregular under cross-currents of buying and selling.
Most price changes were in the small fractions, but a few wide moving issues swung nearly 4 points either way.
Oils were well out in front of the rest of the market, and the chemicals did well. There are several mildly depressed areas including motors, aircrafts, coppers, and drillers, railroads, steels and airlines were steady with a few good gainers.

NYC Board Tells Coach to Resign
NEW YORK (H)—Nat Holman, who spent virtually his entire adult life building City College of New York into a national basketball power, was told today to retire or be fired in an unprecedented decision by the Board of Higher Education.
The graying perfectionist of the court only last week was cleared of charges of misconduct by a majority report of a three-man trial committee of the board as a result of the college basketball scandals of 1951. Complete exoneration by the entire tribunal was regarded as nothing more than a formality.
But for the first time, the board overruled the recommendation of its trial committee and thereby blotted out the 24-year career of the man who became known to countless thousands as "Mr. Basketball."

Phony Savings Demos Cry at Budget Trim
WASHINGTON (H)—Democrats fired charges of "phony savings" at Republican budget trimming today as the House wrangled over a bill appropriating $1,146,988,000 to finance the State, Justice and Commerce departments for the fiscal year starting next July 1.
Maritime and airline subsidies—along with the federal highway aid program—touched off hot disputes over government spending.
In yesterday's initial action, the House voted tentatively to hold back nearly half the 73 million dollars requested by the Eisenhower administration to subsidize American airlines for the coming year.
Republican spokesman said this reduction was not intended as savings. They proposed financing airline subsidy programs only temporarily until the Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB) is able to recompute subsidy formulas in the light of a recent Supreme Court decision.
The court held CAB must base payments on the profit and loss from an airline's entire operations, rather than on losses suffered from a single operation alone.
The decision placed in question subsidy payments primarily to a few big international airlines experiencing losses on their foreign operations—as distant from domestic runs.
Rep. Rooney (D-NY) top Democrat on the Appropriations subcommittee accused Republicans of claiming "phony savings by deferring payments."
He also served notice he would seek to sever a House vote to appropriate 40 million dollars for subsidy payments to air carriers when the bill comes up for final approved tomorrow.
The sum is designed to carry all airlines until next March 1 when the CAB is expected to complete its re-estimate.

Traffic Increase Is Indicated
LITTLE ROCK (H)—An analysis of gasoline sales shows that traffic on Arkansas highways increased four per cent in 1953.
Reporting this today the Senate Highway Department said most of the increase over 1952 was on the interstate highways.

NLB Stripped of Some Power

WASHINGTON (AP) The House Labor Committee voted today to strip the National Labor Relations board of its authority to try unfair labor practice cases.

Rep. R. Hol (Calif.) said he commited vote, interpreted as a reversal for President Eisenhower, was 14-13 and criss-crossed party lines.

The proposal, one of four which the committee had before it, would abolish the NLB as a quasi-judicial agency and establish it as strictly an administrative body. It would continue to handle matters concerning representation, including collective bargaining elections. However, all unfair labor practice cases would be referred to federal courts, with the complainant having the alternative of presenting his own case of having it presented through the district attorney. Chairman McConnell (Pa) of the House group and Sen. H. Alexander Smith (R-NJ) Senate labor chairman, had a breakfast date with President Eisenhower only a few hours ahead of the session. There was no notice of what was discussed at the White House.

St. Francis, Bradley Are Tourney Bound

By IRP WATSON

NEW YORK (AP) The Bradley and St. Francis of Brooklyn basketball teams have learned to their sorrow that a bid to one of the big postseason tournaments isn't worth any points in a regular-season game.

Bradley, which meets Oklahoma City in a first-round game of the National Collegiate Basketball Championships, was favored over St. Francis last night and ran up a 10-point lead in the first quarter. But St. Francis, running fourth in the Missouri Valley Conference and never a mottended for new tournament, pulled even by halftime and kept going for an 89-79 upset. Bradley had beaten its old rival 76-59 earlier in the season.

St. Francis had an even ruder surprise. The Terriers took their 20-3 record and National Invitation Tournament credentials up to play Siena, which had won only 5 of 18. Siena came from a 12-point deficit to score a 67-60 upset.

The two big tournaments split even in intertournament battles for prestige as the NCAA's Fordham outlasted Manhattan of the NIT in overtime 73-68 and Wichita of the NIT whipped Oklahoma City 76-60.

Eight Short Sprinters in Spa Feature

HOT SPRINGS (AP)—Eight horses who've been doing most of their running in the short prints connected today in Oaklawn Park's first distance feature of the season.

Henry Worest's Wismo a four-year-old filly who won her only previous start here when the horse that finished first was disqualified, was favored to win the mile and 70 yard allowance test.

Wismo carried only 102 pounds in the event, named the Trailways Purse.

Top weighted at 120 pounds is C. C. Caudle's Pusan who likes the longer runs. J. W. Sniger's Happy Age and F. W. Harper's Battle H, both winners here last year were expected to draw strong support along with Wismo.

Others in the field were Mr. and Mrs. L. Handelman's Red Grant; Mrs. L. Barry and Mrs. B. Feder's Pat-the-Pilot; Mrs. L. Fry's Best Air and Mrs. Clyde Locklear's Andros.

Dark Buster finally found the way yesterday to handily turn back seven other sprinters in the $2,200 feature. It was the first victory in three starts here for Mrs. V. Whitley's runner.

The four-year-old gelding, with Tommy Osment in the irons, shot to the front on the outside as the field completed the final turn into the stretch. He won by six lengths. Brookhaven finished second, and Easy Reward was third.

Dark Buster toured the six furlongs in 1:08 1/8 over a heavy track and paid $5.60, $4.00 and $3.20.

The Doctor Disagrees

CHAPTER TWENTY-NINE

"YOU trying to say I got silicone?" Evans demanded of Talbot. "No, I'm not ready to say that. But you are asking for it. And if you could, I'd fire you from your job at the plant, Evans. You're a bad risk, and now you're making bad risks of the men under you."

Evans got to his feet. "Oh, no!" he blustered. "Why, I've never been sick a day in my life!"

Craig rose, too. "That's not much to boast about. It only means you'll take it harder when sickness comes to you."

"You're not going to scare me into using your machines, Doc," Evans assured him, and swaggered out.

That sort of thing bothered Craig. There should be a way . . . but there shouldn't, either. He didn't want to be forced to do anything against his own judgment, mistaken or otherwise.

Still, an employer should be able to discharge a "dangerous" workman. He should be made to discharge him—just as he could be made to clean up a fire hazard.

Craig debated these things one Saturday afternoon when he had suggested to Shelly that they drive out into the country, take a picnic lunch along. He had to go see an old lady in the nursing home at Allentown—it was a warm spring day.

"Hot as the hinges," he agreed cheerfully.

It was a rarely gay mood for Craig as Shelly knew him, and they started out in a true picnic spirit. And then, quite soon, he became absorbed in his worried talk about the plant workers. So absorbed that when they passed the highway into the Walsh property, Craig did not see the girl in the car which came slowly between the gates. Shelly saw her; and most certainly Eleanor saw Craig and his companion.

Shelly resisted an urge to turn and look back; instead, she lifted her pretty chin, and touched her fingers to the smoothness of her hair which she had drawn tightly back from her face—a la Myra—letting it cluster in small, bobbing curls at the back of her head. Her dress was yellow, as simple as a schoolgirl's. And what was wrong with her going on a picnic?

Though, of course, she knew what was "wrong." Her own motives were innocent; this evening she would write Stephen all about it. He'd be glad that she and Craig had had a picnic. As for Eleanor

The nursing home had used to be the County Poor Farm, and, like most institutions of its sort, it now was leased to some private person who, for the amount of their state pension checks, housed and cared for the lonely old folk. Stephen had made medical care to this place one of his charities; Craig had carried on for him.

Craig stopped to visit it now, and when he had finished, they drove on and selected a certain field and hilltop clump of trees for their picnic. Shelly sat with her back against a tree, Craig lay on the downward slope, his hands clasped under his head. Donald explored the fascinations of the pasture.

Craig pulled one leg upward so that it bent at the knee and his foot rested flat upon the ground. "I don't know, Shelly," he said, thinking about the sad old people he had just left, "we think we are going towards progress. There are all the labor-saving devices to give people more leisure, but what use do we make of that leisure? We doctors struggle to prolong life—but why? To spend added years at Allentown? When housewives used to put Granny behind the kitchen stove and worked around her in a cheerful, steaming mess of wash-tub and baking day, weren't both of them happier?"

"You worry about too many things," Shelly protested. "And you make them all your worries."

He turned toward her, propping his head on his hand and elbow. "Why not? So many things keep kicking me in the shins!"

"But, Craig, one man can't carry the problems of the world!"

"He can try!" said the dark man grimly.

Then he laughed at himself, and whistled Donald back to them.

"Shelly," said Craig, "why do I always spend my time with you sounding off in my best save-the-world vein?"

She looked at him in surprise. "Don't you do it with everyone?"

"I do not."

"What do you talk about to other people?"

A spark in his eye recognized the last minute choice of the final word. "I don't do much talking at all. I let them talk."

"But you . . ."

She waited, her pretty lips parted. He laughed. "You have a good line," he told her.

"It is not a line!"

"Not in any deliberate sense," he agreed quickly. "But just the same, you are a talented listener. You sit there—"

"Don't you dare call me a doll!"

"Not again."

"I wasn't going to. By this time I know you are not one."

"All right then. Say what you began."

He lay back again, and put his forearm across his eyes. "Let's see—I said you were a talented listener. You are! You sit quietly interested, and listen. Now and then, you make a thoughtful comment in a voice as soft and thrilling as the touch of a woman's fingers against a man's cheek."

Shelly said nothing. Panic beat in her breast; she wished he wouldn't. . . . She hoped he wouldn't.

He did not. After a silence of perhaps five minutes, he began to talk again, quietly, of his difficulties with Bob Evans and the other men at the plant. He called this evidence of his own failure at the plant. He was about ready to tell Everett Carr to get another doctor, some specialist in industrial medicine.

"I thought you'd made a study of that," Shelly demurred, very careful to speak in an offhand tone.

"Of the industrial situation and the laws—yes—but I don't seem able to reach the men."

"But . . ."

He smiled a little. "My intentions are of the best. But I'm not getting anywhere. What we need is a way to force the men to use the safety devices and provisions. Take the plant here. A man who contacts silicosis after refusal to use the aluminum dust which we provide should not be allowed to ask for compensation by law, let alone get it."

"But he can?"

"Sure. Say that big ox, Evans, picks up a virus next winter—and can't seem to get over his acute bronchitis; he'll demand the works. And get it."

"I don't think he should."

"There are those who argue in the same way. Not only in the matter of aluminum dust, but in the use of other safety devices—men who won't wear safety goggles, or use other types of respirators."

"Why don't they fire the men who won't comply with the rules? Why doesn't E. J. fire Evans? Wouldn't he, at your say-so?"

"I might tell you to ask E. J. that, Shelly."

"He wouldn't answer me. He'd look at me pityingly, and say, 'Run along. Girls can't understand things of this sort.'"

Craig chuckled. "I can't understand 'em, either. All I know is that it is pretty hard to fire a man under our present laws, regulations and so on."

"You mean, they'd strike if . . ."

"That's one weapon, of course. I mean the company is tied hand and foot. The bigger the company, the more ropes. About all they can do is to make the plant as safe as possible, and then try to sell their program to the men."

For a time he was silent. Shelly waited.

"That's where my failure lies, Shelly," he said softly. "The company has a better chance of selling its health and safety program if it provides the men with a doctor they trust."

A little wind set the meadow grass into deeper waves, rustled the leaves overhead, and lay cool upon Shelly's bare arms and her throat. "But the men should trust you, Craig."

"The only thing that matters is that they don't. Some of 'em."

"Not that Armes thing again?"

"I'm not sure what their reasons are. Probably something personal to them."

"You have something in mind."

"Not really. But I suppose I'll find out—if I stick around."

"You promised Stephen you would stick around."

"I said I'd try. I am trying . . ."

Their eyes met and held.

"I threw the studio a curve on that picture. I had been on suspension for a year and told them I was ready to come back to work. They didn't have a thing ready for me. So they sent me the 'Farmer' script, which was originally planned for Mitzi Gaynor and Robert Wagner. They thought sure I'd turn it down. I fooled them."

"Thank heaven I had a good picture like 'Millionaire' as my last at the studio. Otherwise I would have been dead."

Senator Has His Say in Reply to Ike

WASHINGTON (INS) Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy said today he and President Eisenhower "apparently disagree only on how we should handle those who protect Communists."

The senator reacted promptly to the President's news conference charge that McCarthy, in his row with Army Secretary Robert T. Stevens, had shown a "disregard" for "the standards of fair play recognized by the American people." The Wisconsin Republican declared in a prepared statement that "apparently" he and Mr. Eisenhower "now agree on the necessity of getting rid of Communists."

He added: "We apparently disagree only on how we should handle those who protect Communists."

But the senator called his controversy with the administration easily "tempest in a teapot" and declared that a further verbal exchange would be "worse than ridiculous."

McCarthy handed newsmen a prepared statement in which he declared: "It is important to remember that this silly tempest in a teapot arose because we dared to bring to light the cold, unpleasant facts about a fifth Amendment Communist army officer who was promoted, given special immunity from duty outside the United States, and finally given an honorable discharge with the full knowledge of all concerned that he was a member of the Communist party."

"It now appears that for some reason he was a sacred cow of certain army brass."

"A continued exchange of statements about our exposure of this fifth Amendment Communist army officer is worse than ridiculous."

"I stated last night that I will take no further part in this point less waste of time. Rather I shall spend my time in action—in the continued exposure of those who are dedicated to the Communist enslavement of the world."

McCarthy said that if "a stable, arrogant or whimsical man in a position of power appears before the committee and is found aiding the Communist Party, he will be exposed."

Grable Won't Try Too Hard in New Films

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Betty Grable, the girl with the gorgeous gams, is hard to work on her first picture since leaving her old home lot. But she says she's not going to knock herself out for her career.

"Look, I've had it," she says. "I've had the gravy for a good number of years, and I've enjoyed it. Now let the younger kids work their heads off. Not me. I've got other things in life to be interested in."

The other things include her husband, Harry James, their two daughters and their race horses, including the fleet James Session.

"I've enjoyed just looking after them for a change," says Betty.

"I feel like a lousy mother when I have to be away from the kids all day. Now that they're in school, they don't get home until 4 in the afternoon. But I still would like to be there when they arrive."

"I'm not going to knock myself out for my career. This is the pattern I have been following for the last four or five years. I was on suspension a large part of the time."

Right now she's getting a real workout in "Three for the Show" at Columbia. She has several spirited dances directed by Jack Cole. On one of the hottest days of the year, she was under the glaring lights, trying to look cool in a comedy scene with Gower Champion.

Gorgeously gowned in a fire-engine red outfit, with a milk-lined coat to match, she stepped out of the scene to pose under some more hot lights for fashion stills.

When she was free, I asked how it felt to be doing a picture away from 20th Century-Fox for the first time in 14 years.

"Once you're inside the stage, there's not much difference," she observed. "The four walls look the same no matter what studio it is."

Things are much the same, since she has her same veteran "wrecking crew"—makeup man, hairdresser and wardrobe girl. In fact, everything has been done for her comfort.

"It's a funny thing," she laughed, "but this is the picture I got my last suspension over. I didn't want to do the picture. After Fox came to me again and I said 'I want things I didn't think they would give me. They surprised me and came through with everything I wanted including CinemaScope. So I had to give in."

She talked about her last two pictures at Fox, which were "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying" and "The Farmer Takes a Wife." Concerning the latter she says: "That was a picture? I was all about half a

'Hi-fi' Hounds Are Coming Back to Town

BY ED CREAUGH
(For Hal Boyle)
WASHINGTON (A) — Clamp on your earmuffs, people. The woof and tweet boys, sometimes known as the hi-fi hounds, are coming to town.

You've met some of them already, chances are, "Hi-fi," of course, stands for high fidelity. It does not mean, in this case the quality you esteem in a husband or wife. It means the attempt to make the noise that comes out of a phonograph record sound exactly like the noise that went into it.

Now hi-fi, like the drinking of schnapps, can be a hobby, a part-time occupation or a way of life. Also, like schnapps drinking, it's treacherous. You say to yourself, "I'll buy just one more gadget and then swear off" — and the next thing you know you're up to your attars in loudspeakers.

And boy what a financial hang-over!

You can look into this pastime

Hobby Finally Lands
Him in Hospital
..... GALVESTON, Tex. (UP)—Mack Donald Rogers' great affinity for motor scooters and motor bikes has put him in the hospital for the first time in his 74 years.

Rogers, who 'didn't think I was too old before but I do now,' went to the hospital with a broken leg after trying to dodge a small puppy that ran into the path of the motor scooter he was riding.

Rogers, who once worked for the Ringling Brothers Circus as caretaker for the 20-ton elephant, Jumbo, hates motorcycles. But motor bikes and scooters are his weakness.

proximity and sniffing. Later the less-replaced this nasal nonsense.

Egyptians quaffed beer made of barley. Since they didn't have hops, they used the lupin, skirret herb and an Assyrian root for flavor.

Today's sheath gown was popular then but with a difference. With the Egyptian women, it hung from below the bosom to the ankles.

Both sexes shaved their heads for reasons of religion, hygiene and just plain heat. Beards were forbidden although the bigshots were allowed fake beards. Even the queens donned these phony beards.

The women also outlined the veins of their chests in blue red oiled their lips, tinged their cheeks with red and white and applied orange henna to the tips of their fingers.

Antient Egyptians apparently ate with their fingers. They had geese, ducks and pigeons but no chickens. Beasts of burden included oxen and donkeys but no camels. They came later.

Dancers were extremely graceful and often appeared naked. Which shows you how accurate must often be sacrificed in films.

would be eagerly welcomed.

But she'd not let herself be too easily discouraged. The next morning she said to second call. This time she was still in her housecoat. She was invited Shelly to her breakfast room where she was having a cup of coffee with a neighbor. Both women were wives of plant workers; Shelly stated her purpose at once. As the plant doctor's secretary, she was endeavoring to find out how much the wives knew about the safety program at the plant.

"Now don't tell me," she said gaily, "that it's none of your business. Because I'm sure you'd be directly concerned if your husband became ill or was hurt."

"Well, sure . . ." said the visiting neighbor.

And both women waited for Shelly to talk some more. She did. That morning, she made a complete thing telling of the measures being taken by the company to prevent accidents of all sorts, including the results of silica inhalation.

"Don't the men do what they're told?" asked her hostess blandly.

"Not all of them, I'm afraid."

"Can't the plant homes make 'em do it?"

"Not as well as you could, if you want to," said Shelly. "You need to no more than insist on your husband showering and changing his clothes before he comes home from the plant."

They looked at her questioning-ly.

"This men themselves demand that proper change rooms are provided," Shelly explained, "showers, lockers, and go forth and then a lot of them won't use them."

"But this way it saves on clothes," said one of the women.

"How?"

"You got work clothes, you got good clothes. If you change at the plant, you'd have to have something in between, and you have to take your own clothes home for special."

Shelly frowned. "But if his health was better, protected by using the change room with its ultra-violet lights, and its dust impregnation . . ."

"Look, Mrs. Carr," said the house-keeper, looking her arms on the table edge and leaning toward the visiting woman. "I have been thinking." "You can't come here and tell us how to run our business."

Shelly drew back, her smile fading. "I'm not told me," she said gaily. "— Dr. Talbot is having the women giving some of the men to use his safety devices. I thought, as one woman to another—

Her hostess stood up, and so did Shelly. The other woman watched. "Let me tell you something for your own good, Mrs. Carr: I'm older'n you, and I don't listen to talk like this. I will say this to you. You just try to be good to your wife to your husband as I am to mine, and we'll all be better off."

Shelly left, but she thought that over, and hesitated about making any more calls. She didn't know what the woman was hinting, and she thought perhaps she did not want to know. The next day, however, when she went to see Dorace Evans, she learned.

"My husband don't care much for Dr. Talbot," Dorace said flatly.

"Didn't he like Stephen either?"

"Well, to be frank—if you work for the refractories, you'd better like the Carrs—or else."

"Oh, I don't believe that's fair."

"Mrs. Carr, do you know much about working for the Carrs?"

It was rude, but it was a valid question.

"No," Shelly said, "I don't. In fact, I don't know too much about working—for anyone. I had one job for a very short time before my marriage—and since—well, the little I do in the office."

The woman's eyes narrowed.

"Funny, you never worked there when your husband was home," she said.

I didn't need to. Stephen had a well-trained secretary. But she left without warning, and I filled in. And now—Oh, it's a way to pass—I mean, to fill my time."

"Mhmmmm," said Dorace Evans. The tall woman is red-checked gingham studied her visitor with avid interest. "You're pretty young, aren't you?"

"I'm twenty-five, almost."

"Too bad your husband had to go off to war so soon after you were married."

"Yes. But it was his own decision, and I agreed to it."

"I'll bet you're lonely."

Shelly laughed. "Of course I am. That's why the work helps."

"Yes, but maybe some other woman—"

Dorace stopped abruptly.

"Mrs. Evans," said Shelly with determination, "since here for purposes which I've stated, you've straddled as far as saying that you don't like Dr. Talbot."

"I said he didn't like him. But I don't care too much for him, myself. A lot of us feel the same way."

or other of that old gag: "Isn't that wonderful?" "What?" "I said, isn't that a wonderful record?" "Still can't hear you," "I said" —you're shouting at the top of your lungs now — "Isn't that a fine record?" "Can't hear a thing you say — this confounded record makes too much noise!" If I sound envious of the hounds with their "woofers," which are big speakers to catch the low notes, and their "tweeters," little speakers to pick up the high notes, it's become I am envious. I'd like to put together one of those fancy outfits too. Trouble is I can't afford the 16-room house with sound-proofed walls that really should go with a hi-fi system.
